(played by Stacey Dash). Stereotypical by society rank, they had money, style and perceived attitude of 'means girls'. But innocence was relatable, and their friendship, lovable. Its modest $60 million box office, gave no indication, of its future pop icon stature. Scaling the same mountain as American Graffiti, it plateaued far before the peak, yet it launched the careers of Silverston, Donald Faison, Brittany Murphy, Paul Rudd and Stacey Dash. 20 years later, it's influence and staying power proved generational, when Iggy Azalea's Clueless inspired music video for 'Fancy' (viewed 846 million times); propelled her to the big time. While Silverstone and Murphy were close, superstardom did not find the Clueless stars, but their longevity and varying degrees of Hollywood success, proved anything but random, inclusive of the wayward Dash.
this is... the Story within the Story:
Never the leading lady, but for 3 decades, 50 year old Stacy Dash made a life in Tinseltown, from a respected acting career. Convinced she chases happy, since fame lives there, allows her to keep moving. But her zig zag moves: films to video girl to a flopped stint on Fox News, to a congressional candidate, representing 44th district (Long Beach/Compton) as Trump Republican, no less, has seen her evolve into the type of Rep. that cannot be sent to an already wrecked congress. 1st nationwide stomp, too painful for viewers to watch. Imagine pain in Dash: not only was happy not found, but she lost herself years back.
